BULAWAYO, SATURDAY, JULY 30, 1966

CPYRGHT B'nai B'rith leader's visit

The director-general of the B'nai B'rith office of international affairs in Washington, Mr. Saul E. Joffes, said yesterday that "it would be well to give Rhodesia a chance to demonstrate to the world her capacity for self-government. Sympathy and help should be given, not hindrance."

Mr. Joffes, who met the Mayor of Bulawayo, Mr. Abe Menashe, yesterday, is a Harvard graduate. He holds four university degrees and has taught at Harvard University and at the Boston University law school.

His organisation, B'nai B'rith is a Jewish service organisation concerned with spreading "goodwill and benevolence" throughout the world.

At the Jewish Progressive Synagogue last night he gave a talk on "the problems faced by Jews in the Soviet countries, where," he said, "a strong policy of anti-Semitism is being pursued."

He leaves for South Africa today with plans to combine the present B'nai B'rith lodges there to form a district organisation, with headquarters probably in Johannesburg.

There is a branch of the organisation in Salisbury, and the possibility of one in Bulawayo is "on the cards."

This is Mr. Joffes' third visit to Rhodesia, the last being "two or three years ago."
